Vice-President Now Has a Nice Flag for Himself

WASHINGTON.-Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall has a flag of his own If and it is an official banner. This means that every time he visits an American warship and is piped over the side he will enjoy the pleasurable emotion of knowing that the V. P. flag is fluttering from the masthead. The V. P. flag is a snow-white square of bunting, on a field of which is a blue bird representing the engle in the coat of arms of the United States. This makes the V. P. flag the reverse of the president's flag, which consists of the coat of arms of the nation on a blue field. This is the first time in the history of the American navy that there has been prescribed for vice-president a distinctive flag be displayed on naval vessels while he is on board one of them It remained for Secretary Daniels to provide Mr. Marshall with a flag. It grew out of the fact that Vice-President Marshall was going to San Francisco to represent President Wilson at the Panama-Pacific exposition. When the president arranged for himself to be represented in this manner, and plans were made for the vice-president to be received on board the armored cruiser Colorado, the flagship of Admiral Howard, it occurred to Secretary Daniels that a more fitting reception in the attendant ceremonies should be accorded him than those previously prescribed. Hence the new flag.

This new flag has now been permanently prescribed for the vice-president in the future and will hereafter be displayed on ships of the navy whenever the vice-president is on board. The ceremonies attending a visit of the president to a ship of the navy include the manning of the rail by the crew, hoisting his flag and firing a salute of 21 guns upon his arrival, and hauling down his flag and firing a second salute upon his departure from the ship. The honors given the vice-president were formerly the same as those given the president, except that the rail was not manned by the crew and the salute of 19 guns was given only upon his departure, and the national colors were dis-

What National Bird Reserves Do for the Farmer

T is believed in Washington that the farmers in many parts of the United States have little idea of the extent to which the federal government goes to protect them and their interests from harm. Department of agriculture officials have often cried out against the wanton slaughter of birds, declaring that these birds were necessary to keep down the insect pests and thereby protect the farmers' crops, but they have not stopped at this. Without much ado, they have been selecting the quiet, isolated nooks of the country as bird reserves, as places where the birds could go and under the protection of the authorities rear their young in security and comfort.

At the present time there are 74 such bird reserves scattered throughout the entire country, and especially on the lonely islands that are found along the different coasts. These reserves have been created through reference from the interior department to the president, who signs excutive orders declaring the place to be a reserve, Immediately these places come under the general law which makes it unlawful to kill birds, take their eggs or to willfully disturb the birds. A maximum fine of $500 and a sentence in jail for six months are provided for violations

The bird reserves now existing are being administered under the direction of the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture. During the last year nine new bird reserves were established, scattered between Alaska and Porto Rico; two new ones in Alaska, one of which, in the Aleutian islands, was established not only for the purpose of protecting native birds, but also for the encouragement of propagation of fur-bearing animals, reindeer and food fishes. Other bird reserves established during the year were in Arkansas, Alabama and Mississippi and also the Canal

"Mystery" of Chimney of the British Embassy

NOTHER "mystery" of international politics was uncovered in Washing-A ton recently by an American newspaper man. Fired by memories of the romance and intrigue in Washington during the Russo-Japanese war and by a knowledge of the "secret service" now going on in connection with the devious route of Mexican politics, but steadled by the dignity of that solemn, imposing, red-brick pile, the British embassy, at the corner of Connecticut avenue and N street northwest, the reporter linked arms with luck and inquired at the embassy: What happened when you had your chimney fixed?" Said chimney is in the chancel lery, between that building and the residence next door. The chimney wouldn't draw, and, therefore, there was not enough fire to warm the chilled secretaries and attaches.

Hundreds of Washingtonians who had whispered to one another the story of how a bricklayer was employed to block up an opening in the chimney, and how a set of dictaphone wires was found there, were doomed to read an unravelment of this "mystery" of international politics that is amus ing rather than important. Here it is as it came from one of the embassy attaches:

"What happened when we had our chimney fixed? Why, the fire burned all right. What did we find? Why, we found an awful lot of dust and soot. Charley is going to get a scoiding for letting that chimney get so dirty." "A Dictaphone Easily Could Be a Diplomat's Delight."

What Becomes of the Holes in Postage Stamps

O NE who passes by the bureau of printing and engraving in Washington may often see on a concrete platform a number of barrels being roughly 'headed up" and loaded into wagons. If he takes a peek into one of the barrels he will see that they are filled with most peculiar looking stuff which he will be at a loss to identify. It is composed of very small particles seemingly of all the colors in the

If the passer-by asks one of the workmen what the queer stuff is, he will be told "just holes," and further inquiry reveals that it is composed of the tiny disks made by the machines through which the sheets of postage stamps are run for perforation. They fall into baskets and being of no use whatever, are barreled up and carted to the city dump.

The bureau of printing and engraving turns out a barrel and a half of these "holes" every week day, which means nine barrels a week and 468 barreis a year. It is needless to say no one ever counted the number of "holes" in a barrel, but as the bureau prints 12,000,000,000 stamps a year and there are 21 perforations for each stamp, or a total of 251,000,000,000 for the year's output, it is evident that each of the 468 barrels contains approximately 538,461,538 holes.

OF WESTERN CANADA

He Is Perfectly Satisfied, and Tells of His Neighbors Who Have Done Well.

Walter Harris, formerly lived near Julietta in Warren township, Indiana. He now lives at Hussar, Alberta. In writing to his home paper in Indiana, he says that the failure is the man who always blames the country. He fails to see his own mistakes, has missed his calling and is not fitted for farming. The two seasons just past have been entirely different. In 1913 plenty of rain came in June and a good crop followed, but the fall was dry and but little snow in the winter followed by a very dry summer, and a short crop. Only those that had farmed their land properly were able to meet expenses.

For example, last year the Crowfoot Farming Company, south of here, threshed from 1,250 acres 38,-000 hushels of wheat. One-half section made 26 bushels, the poorest of all. This year on 1,350 acres they threshed nearly 26,000 bushels. Last year's crop sold at 75 cents from their own this year's crop brought $1.00 at threshing time. Eight thousand bushels unsold would bring now around $1.25. The manager and part owner was raised in Ohio and farmed in Washington several years. He and his wife spent last winter in Ohio. She told me a few days ago that the climate here was much better than

A man by the name of George Clark threshed 75 bushels of oats, 45 bushels of barley and 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. He had 15,000 bushels of old oats as well as wheat and barley in his granaries that have almost doubled in price. He came from Washington, where he sold a large body of land around $200 that he bought around $3.00 per acre, He then refers to a fallure. A large company in the eastern states, owning a large farm near Hussar pays its manager $3,000 a year. The farm has not been a success. Probably the manager's fault. Mr. Harris says conditions are not as good as could be wished for, but on the ending of the war good crops, with war prices, will certainly change conditions, and it seems to me that the one who owns land that will raise 100 bushels of oats, 75 bushels of barley or 40 bushels of wheat is the one who "laughs

The above yields may seem exaggerations to many, and are far above the average, but you should remember that the man who fails is counted in to make the average, and there are instances on record here that would far exceed the above figures.

Nor is grain the only profitable thing that can be raised here. There are many fine horse ranches, some of to thoroughbreds, and others imported from the old countries. They run on the range nearly all the year. The owners put up wild hay to feed them if the snow should get too deep for from 500 to 7,000 head of cattle. One man I know sold $45,000 worth of fat cattle this fell. He winters his catstraw and water, paying 75 cents a month per head, or if there is enough straw to winter 400 or 500 head they buy the straw and water and cave a men to look after the cattle.-Advertisement.
